

Figure 1. The Double Diamond: In creative processes, possible ideas are generated ('divergent thinking') before refining and narrowing them down to the best idea ('convergent thinking'). This happens twice, once to confirm the problem definition and once to create the solution.

